Symbolising the inexhaustible melting of the ice shelves of the South Pole (such as Larsen A, B and C, the most famous), the ice table Larsen is inspired by Antarctica's ice shelf Larsen C.

It is built in solid alabaster slices and cast resin. Like the other pieces of the Glaciers collection, its design aims to raise awareness about global warming and rising sea levels which are leading to the ice caps melting in both polar regions and mountainous glaciers.

The alabaster work takes place in Volterra whilst the casting and some of these steps are carried out directly by FMM.

Francesco Maria Messina was born in Pisa, Italy where he undertakes classical studies. After attending the École Spéciale d'Architecture in Paris, he then proceeds to receive his masters degree, graduating in 2015 from the innovative Confluence Institute in Lyon, France founded by Odile Decq and Matteo Cainer, after a brief experience at Tulane University in New Orleans, USA. He subsequently continues his international experience abroad, initially working in Paris and then in Cameroon, Africa.

It's between 2018 and 2020 that Francesco becomes a full fledged designer conceiving and creating five design lines, whilst also participating in the launch of a new luxury furniture brand named Cypraea, a Mauritian brand of which he was also creator and brand manager.

His works are immediate success, and exhibited at Rossana Orlandi's Gallery in Milan and Porto Cervo. In the same year, he also exhibits in London.

In 2020, strengthened by this very successful experience, he returns to Tuscany and opens his own design studio. FMM focuses on the pressing global issues through a creative and material dialogue between nature and design, and between design and materiality. His new works are displayed at Rossana Orlandi's Gallery in Milan and Porto Cervo and in 2021 at the Venice Design Biennale, and Arte in Nuvola in Rome, where his works are exhibited by Spazio AREA and displayed at the Alessandro Vitiello Home Gallery. In France he is represented by Galerie des Lyons in Paris and Cannes. In the US he is currently working with Unique Design Group and Galerie Philia.

Francesco's works have been published in various books, international magazines, exhibited internationally and are currently part of various private collections.
